TURIN

A City on the Move

The birthplace of the Italian automobile industry and home to many of Italy's and the world's leading design studios, Turin over the years has successfully managed to free itself of its image of grey industrial city, by investing in its rich artistic heritage and developing its cultural scene and commercial sector. Recently the city was nominated World Book Capital (along with Rome) and World Design Capital. Books, in fact, have been one of the leading players in this cultural renaissance of the city, thanks to the International Book Fair. Alongside culture, gourmet wine and cuisine have also been an important calling card attracting visitors to the city. Every two years at the end of October, the Salone del Gusto delights the taste buds with its highlights of Piedmontese and other specialities, attracting hundreds of thousands of visitors. Both fairs are held in the spacious exhibition centre of Lingotto, in what was once the first FIAT factory, renovated in the 1980s by Renzo Piano into a conference centre, auditorium, hotel, and shopping centre, and the prestigious picture gallery housing the Pinacoteca Agnelli. Don't miss the opportunity to stop for lunch at the emporium and kitchens of Italian gastronomy, "Eataty", located in the wonderfully restored premises of the old Carpano distillery, which once produced vermouth.

The Torino 2006 Olympic Winter Games have left behind their legacy of world class sporting facilities, including the venues Palasport Olimpico and Palavela, designed to host events of all kinds - and not just sports - accessible to all people.
